BACK FROM WASHINGTON.

Henry S. Gay Enjoyed Trip to G. A. R. Encampment.

In that time he found that great changes had taken place in the city. Mr. Gay enlisted in 1862, going out to assist in surgeon work, and was located at the hospital in Washington. While in Washington this time he visited all the chief points of interest and found it a very pleasant experience getting about, and the people of Washington were very cordial and seemed to take delight in making visitors feel at home. People from all states of the union were met also and a general feeling of cordiality prevailed. The oldest man in Washington, the oldest man in the world, was present at the encampment. Mr. Gay has returned to his home in Mountain avenue, after his trip to Washington, where he was a member of the order and had reception rooms at their rooms on Seventh street.

Mr. Gay had the opportunity to attend the reception at President Wilson's home and shook hands with the president, who responded to Mr. Gay's greeting by saying "I'm glad to see you."

The Connecticut headquarters were at the Harrington and all the veterans from Norwich took part in the procession. Mr. Gay marched over the whole route and when he came home was feeling better than when he left here. The oldest man in the world was present at the encampment.
